Our mission is sexual and reproductive. Our focus is the plant kingdom of the universe. Our motto is to seek and to share.

We are the International Plant Propagators' Society. A unique group of people passionately bound together in our pursuit of excellence, to seek and to share our love of plants.

Our membership crosses the human barriers of society, religion, and language, social and economic status. It also joins together in respect; industry and academia, government and private, professional and amateur, joined in a fervent desire to seek and to share the venue of beauty and peace of mind that plants can offer each of us and society.

We travel with, and to friends, to learn and to grow in our careers, by observing how others propagate, grow, and use plants. Suddenly in a moment of ecstasy we discover a new and exciting plant — all in the encompassing fellowship of a seeking and sharing society.

Those of you, who are of a religious nature, remember God's call to Isaiah using all five human senses. He heard God's voice, saw the Seraphim, felt the live coals, smelled the smoke, and tasted mercy. Perhaps our passionate call to plants is because we hear the rustling through their leaves, see the beauty of their shape, and feel the texture of their foliage, smell the fragrance of their flowers, and taste their fruit, creating our passion for the living, ever-growing, and changing plant.

Collectively, these five senses create and stimulate our passion and love of plants. It is a process, dynamic with endless combinations and levels of stimuli that sanctify our walk with plants as we travel, awake to each new day, or round a bend on our path of life.

In the theatre of the mind, beauty and peace are truly in the mind of the beholder. As the International Plant Propagators' Society, we desire to seek and to share our passion and love of plants with all mankind, allowing their senses to create their own personal plant venue of beauty and peace.

In the next 24 minutes we can only hear and see our founder's dreams and what our Society has done in its first 50 years of existence.
